"Now I will breast the parapet as my men did," he said, mounting it. He walked across the old no man's land and saw the effects of the British shell fire on the maze of fortifications and trenches which the British had wrested from the Germans. Standing on the edge of a big shell crater, the king looked with a sailor's telescope he was carrying across the telescope he was carrying across the foreground of desolation toward Pozieres, the Bazentins, Longueval and Delville wood. He is the son of a dead Belgian soldier and was found wandering about under shell fire at Ypres, adopted by the battalion and placed on its rolls. He told his story in French to the king and said, "They will not let me go up to fight, but keep me back with the transport." Gen. Joffre came over from his head-quarters and President Poincare came from Paris to take lunch with King George and Sir Douglas Haig. On Sunday King George lunched with King Albert of the Belgians. Throughout the week a motion pleture man was doing his best to keep up with the king, while the diffident Prince of Wales was noticeably proficient in slipping out of the picture just as the operator began turning the crank. Not the least of the many scenes with dramatic appeal during the king's visit was that on the quay when the king landed. He was received by a guard of honor from a battalion of the King's Royal Riffes, 75 per cent of whom had been wounded.

King Issues General Order.

LONDON, August 16 .- After a visit to the front, King George has issued a general order to the army in France expressing his appreciation of the splendid condition and cheerful confidence of all ranks, and, through perdence of all ranks, and, through personal visits to the scenes of later desperate struggles, his understanding of the demands made upon the courage of the men and the physical endurance required to assail and capture positions prepared during the last two years, which were stoutly defended to the last.

Everywhere there is proof that all men and women are playing their part, and I rejoice to think that their noble efforts are being heartily seconded by all classes at home." classes at home."

After an allusion to the happy relations between the entente allied armies and the populations where they are quartered, King George concludes his message as follows:

"Do not think that I and your fellow-countrymen forcet the heavy excellence."

"Do not think that I and your fellow-countrymen forget the heavy eachifices the armies have made and the bravery and endurance they have displayed during the two years of bitter conflict. These sacrifices have not been in vain. The arms of the allies never will be laid down until our cause has triumphed. I return home more than ever proud of you. May God guide you to victory."
